Background

Ecojesuit is an ecology network of Jesuits and partners from around the world. Ecojesuit brings together the concerns of communities from the different regions of the world and the responses and actions taken, while strengthening the scientific knowledge that informs such actions and responses.

Ecojesuit Coordinator Pedro Walpole SJ gives direction to the Flights for Forests program and will work closely with the project officer.

Flights for Forests (FFF) is a voluntary carbon accountability scheme started by the Jesuit Conference Asia Pacific (JCAP). Flights for Forests seeks to generate commitment amongst Jesuits and Jesuit institutions globally to support natural resource management at the local level and contribute to helping rural communities affected by global, economic, and climate changes.

Recognizing the impact of Jesuit travel and work in the environment, the JCAP Reconciliation with Creation program developed a simple carbon accountability scheme encouraging Jesuits and partners to participate by contributing US$ 5 for every flight taken. The money is used to support local and indigenous youth in rural areas to care for creation in very practical ways of regenerating forests and water in their communities in several countries in the region.

Funding for the project officer is coming from the working budget for the Ecojesuit program that is managed by the Environmental Science for Social Change (ESSC), a Jesuit research and training organization in the Philippines, and is not part of the FFF program itself.
